REPORT OF THE SCHOOL BOARD.

TO THE CITIZENS OF SALISBURY :

In tendering our annual report, no mention of the individual schools, other than statistical, will be made. The report deals with the schools rather than with the teachers, with the hope that a general awakening to the importance of educational work, rather than the success and failure of individual teachers, shall be the subject brought to your minds by this report.

In discharging our official duties it has been our purpose to discover and encourage whatever was of true merit, rather than to find fault and magnify defects. In this we have been eminently successful. The teachers, probably without exception, have rendered the best service of which they were capable, and the scholars have generally appreciated the facilities thus afforded.

It is to be regretted that so many changes are made in teachers from year to year, and more especially from term to term. Good teachers do not outlive their usefulness in a school the first term, and much valuable time is saved by retaining them several terms. One who has not noted particularly has no idea of the difference between a school taught continuously by an experienced teacher and one that is often interrupted by a change. The tendency with most agents is to hire a teacher as cheaply as possible, with little regard to qualifications. This, in our opinion, is wrong. Ten weeks of school with a live teacher does more good than twenty weeks with a drone. The best talent possible should be procured, as the child has but a few years to fit himself for the burdens of life and should receive such training as will best fit him to compete with those amongst whom he will be thrown. There is a tendency among us to mistake the true meaning of the word education. A scholar may be quick to learn, able to recite the entire list of text books from beginning to end, and still not have a good education. It is not the different branches which we take as a course of study, nor is it the rapidity with which we master them, but rather the manner in which we learn to apply ourselves. It is the ideas and theories, rather than the mere contents of the text book, that we should seek to gain. This, together with that training of the mind that enables us to quickly and correctly put our ideas and theories into every day practice, constitutes a good education. As a rule, teachers are too much confined to the text book. We believe that, with suitable teachers, a scholar can learn more in the recitation of his lesson to the teacher, than he can by careful and diligent perusal of the text book.

In referring to the Statistical Table you will note that there is a great difference in the interest shown by the parents and citizens of our several districts in the work of the schools. While we heartily thank the parents and citizens who have taken the trouble to visit our schools, we note a deplorable lack of interest in some of our districts. Parents should not only know that their children are in regular attendance at school, but they should find out from time to time what progress they are making in their school work. If parents, who are alone responsible for the education of their children, would spend more time in keeping track of the child's progress and conduct in school than they do in listening to idle tales brought home from school by them, they would have a better insight as to the true state of affairs.

In conclusion we would say that all the schools have had the full amount of schooling, with the exception of the schools at North Road and Raccoon Hill. The school at North Road was closed two weeks earlier on account of sickness, and the winter term for Raccoon Hill had to be dispensed with on account of the burning of the old school house and the incompletion of the new one.
